For example, Ek sou kom - I would come (literally I should come) Like other Germanic languages, Afrikaans also has an analytic passive voice that is formed in the present tense by using the auxiliary verb word (to become) + past participle, and, in the past tense, by using the auxiliary is + past participle.

Afrikaans grammar - Wikipedia

1 -Short Vowel: If you have a short vowel, for example, ^pan, the last letter gets doubled and you add an e. But remember that if its a short vowel, but it ends in d, it no longer becomes double the last letter and add e, but instead becomes double the last letter (which is d) and you add an ens.
