I started heading back to eat at one my staples in Clearwater when I noticed Aunt Lee's Chicken and Fish at 1403 N. Myrtle. I have found fried chicken a little hard to find in the area so I decided to stop. The signs were pushing the gizzards hard, so I got a small order of gizzards and a couple of pieces of fried chicken.

General Lee named his chicken "Nellie" and unfortunately in the end, she did come to an unhappy demise. During the eve of the "Battle of the Wilderness," Lee had invited several Generals to dine with him and his cook couldn't find sufficient food to accommodate all of General Lee's guests, so he killed "Nellie" and served her as part of Lee's dinner party.

The sesame chicken was just alright. I thought the first couple bites were good, but the sauce the chicken was in got kind of boring and sweet & sour-y tasting, which I feel like happens to a lot of Chinese food. There was a decent portion of chicken, but there were hardly any vegetables, I'd say maybe 4 pieces of broccoli, tops, and nothing else.
